

Should children be home schooled or be at school?

Do you think children should home schooled or be taught at school? In this argument I will be pointing out the main points of each view.

Firstly, with home school you can work at any pace, so if you do not finish in the day you can always carry on tomorrow. Therefore, you can do a whole day on one subject. Also, you get to spend more quality time with your family. Many people believe that once you have finished you could play computer games, go for a walk, read a book, do some baking or do some exercise. Finally, if you are an only child then it might be more peaceful and quiet so you might concentrate more. As a result of this you might get more work done. However home school might be more stressful.

On the other hand, being educated at school can be a sensible <sup>choice</sup> ~~choice~~ because you are being taught by a qualified teacher. Studies show, that being taught by a qualified teacher might give you a better chance at a successful job and a social life. It is common knowledge that, if you are struggling then you can get some resources to help you so if you are at school there are more resources to help you then there are at home. Also, you have your friends who you can talk to and play with in person. Finally, you can go on lots of exiting school trips, as a result of this you can learn about new things and have a wider knowledge of things.

Views We have found out that, these views are both quite different from each other, and are lots of other people's different opinions. There are several ~~opinions~~ <sup>views</sup>, but having considered both sides of the argument most of us think yes children should go to school.
